

The surprising way to snag fancy furniture for cheap

By Mark Ellwood

Tori Toth, of StylishStagers.com, was recently hired to custom-decorate a four-bedroom home on the Lower East Side, in the hopes of luring perspective buyers. But a “nosy neighbor” from the floor above stopped in, fell in love with the temporary living room and bedroom design, and offered to snap up all the furnishings. “The best part was we didn’t have to send that furniture back to the warehouse,” Toth says.
